PROJECT DOCUMENTATION • 2026

1. Project Overview

Hearth & Hand is a sample online shopping page for home, kitchen, technology and bag products. The page is built as a single HTML document with CSS styling inside a <style> section. It presents the layout and visual experience of a storefront rather than a complete online shopping system.

The main goal is to make products easy to browse. Visitors see a promotional message, a navigation area, sale banners, a product grid, discounts, prices, ratings, and a final promotional offer. The design uses a consistent forest-green and gold palette to give the store a recognizable look.

2. Main Features

Feature	What it does

Delivery promotion	A gold strip at the top advertises free delivery on orders above ■999.
Brand and navigation	The dark-green header contains the Hearth & Hand name, a search field, Sign in, Wishlist and Cart links. The cart badge displays the sample number 3.
Category links	All, Kitchen, Tech, Home, Bags and Sale links point to the product section using the #products anchor.
Promotional banners	A large Festive Sale banner and two smaller banners highlight discounts and product themes.
Product cards	Eight sample products are shown, each with an emoji-style image, category, product name, rating, description and price.
Discount labels	Red labels such as -24% or -40% visually indicate example discounts.
Price comparison	Sale prices are shown beside old prices with a strikethrough where applicable.
Call-to-action links	Add to cart, Buy now, Shop now and Start shopping links are styled as buttons.
Coupon offer	The page advertises ■200 off a first order using code HEARTH200 on orders above ■1,499.
Footer	A footer identifies the page as a sample store for learning.

3. Technologies Used

HTML5 — structure and content

HTML defines the page content and its structure. Elements such as , <h1>, <h2>, , , <input> and <button> create the header, banners, product cards, descriptions, prices and links. The page title is set to “Hearth & Hand Store”.

CSS3 — appearance and layout

The CSS is written in the document’s <style> block. It controls colors, fonts, spacing, card borders, shadows, hover effects and layout. Reusable class names such as .container, .navbar, .product-grid, .card and .btn keep styling consistent.

No JavaScript or back-end appears in the supplied source

The provided code contains HTML and CSS but no JavaScript, server code, product database, payment gateway or account system. As a result, it demonstrates the appearance of an online store, but it does not currently implement real search, cart updates, sign-in, wishlist storage, checkout or order processing.

4. How the Web Page Was Created

Step 1 — Set up the HTML document

Start with the HTML document declaration, set the language to English, and add metadata for character encoding and the responsive viewport.

Step 2 — Add CSS rules

Create a style block and define shared defaults, the page background, text style, container width, colors and spacing.

Step 3 — Build the header

Add the delivery strip, brand name, search input and button, navigation links, cart count and category menu.

Step 4 — Create the promotions

Use banner containers to show the main sale message and two supporting promotions.

Step 5 — Add the product section

Create a product grid and repeat a card structure for eight sample items. Each card includes product details and action links.

Step 6 — Add the coupon and footer

Place a coupon banner after the grid and a footer at the bottom of the page.

Step 7 — Open and test in a browser

Save the code as an .html file and open it in a web browser. Resize the window and try the links and hover effects to check the layout.

5. How the Web Page Works

What happens when the page loads?

The browser reads the HTML from top to bottom and builds the page elements. It then applies the CSS rules to determine how those elements look and where they are placed. Because the page is a static front-end document, its product names, prices, ratings and promotional text are written directly into the HTML.

How the main interactions behave

Element	Current behaviour in the supplied code
Category links	The links use href="#products", so clicking them jumps to the product section. They do not filter products by category.
Shop now / Start shopping	These links also jump to the product section.
Search field and Search button	The input accepts typed text, but there is no search script to find or filter products.
Sign in / Wishlist / Cart	These are placeholder links using href="#". They do not open account, wishlist or cart pages.
Add to cart / Buy now	These are styled anchor links using href="#". They do not add items to a cart or complete a purchase.
Product card hover	CSS moves the card up slightly and increases its shadow when the pointer is over it.
Button hover	CSS changes the button background and text/border colors when the pointer is over it.

How the layout adapts

The product grid uses CSS Grid with repeat(auto-fit, minmax(230px, 1fr)). This allows the browser to fit as many product columns as the available width permits, while keeping each card at least about 230 pixels wide. The header and promotional coupon use flex layouts with wrapping, helping their content move onto additional lines when space is limited. The viewport meta tag helps the page use the device width on mobile browsers.

Navigation through page anchors

The product heading has id="products". Links that use href="#products" tell the browser to scroll to that element. This is a built-in HTML navigation feature and does not require JavaScript.

6. Important CSS Techniques

- Universal selector (*): Resets margin and padding and uses box-sizing: border-box so element sizing is easier to manage.

- .container: Centers the content and limits its maximum width to 1100 pixels.
- Flexbox: Used in the header, banner arrangement and coupon banner to align items and distribute space.
- CSS Grid: Arranges product cards into responsive columns with consistent gaps.
- Border radius and shadows: Give cards, banners and buttons rounded corners and visual depth.
- :hover: Applies visual changes when a pointer moves over links, buttons or product cards.
- Reusable classes: Classes such as .btn, .btn-dark and .btn-outline allow the same design rules to be reused.

Example of the responsive product grid:

grid-template-columns: repeat(auto-fit, minmax(230px, 1fr));

In plain language: make columns at least 230 pixels wide when possible, create as many columns as fit, and let the columns share the remaining space.

7. Current Limitations and Possible Improvements

The following are possible next steps if the goal is to turn the visual demo into a working e-commerce website. They are recommendations, not features already present in the supplied code.

- Make search work: Use JavaScript to read the search input and show matching product cards.
- Add real category filtering: Connect each category link to a filter that displays only products from that category.
- Implement cart state: Use JavaScript to add items, update quantities and calculate a subtotal; use a server or suitable storage for persistent carts.
- Create product and account pages: Replace placeholder links with real pages and forms.
- Add checkout securely: Integrate a trusted payment provider and server-side order handling; do not handle payment details only in front-end code.
- Use real product images: Replace emoji placeholders with optimized product photos and meaningful alternative text.
- Improve accessibility: Add clear focus styles, accessible labels for search, semantic landmarks and sufficient color contrast.
- Test across devices: Check mobile, tablet and desktop widths and test keyboard navigation.

8. Conclusion

Hearth & Hand is a neatly structured static storefront prototype made with HTML and CSS. Its main strengths are the clear visual hierarchy, consistent colors, promotional banners, product cards, discount presentation, reusable styling and responsive grid layout. Its current role is to demonstrate a store interface. To become a real online shop, it would need working interaction logic, data handling and secure back-end services.

Source note: This guide is based on the supplied 499-line HTML/CSS source. Where behaviour is described as a limitation, that conclusion comes from the absence of JavaScript or back-end code in the supplied file.
